MESSAGE FROM THE CHIEF

Dear community members and friends,

On behalf of the men and women of the Grand Junction Police Department, it is my honor to present our 2024 Annual Report. This year's report highlights the incredible efforts of our dedicated sworn and civilian personnel who serve the City of Grand Junction with integrity and professionalism and brings you the history of the GJPD.

Reflecting on the past year, I am encouraged by the growth of our department and the significant initiatives we have planned for 2025. In 2024, The Grand Junction Police Department responded to 67,710 calls for service, over 5,000 additional calls compared to the previous year, with a notable rise in retail theft-related incidents. At the heart of our approach is the belief that the "little things" matter because they ultimately lead to meaningful, big-picture change. With this mindset, we prioritized addressing retail theft, intensifying efforts to curb criminal activity in gaming establishments, combating dangerous drugs, and enhancing traffic enforcement through focused surge operations.

As our community continues to grow, so do the challenges of protecting and serving its residents. While we are still working toward ideal patrol staffing levels, I'm proud to share that our department welcomed over 20 new officers in 2024, including both new recruits and experienced lateral officers. Beyond building our sworn team, we expanded critical support divisions, including Municipal Park Rangers and the Co-Responder Unit. We know that recruitment and retention are key to sustaining exceptional service. We remain committed to providing top tier training opportunities and ensuring our pay and benefits remain competitive, reflecting the dedication of those who choose to serve.

Looking ahead, 2025 brings exciting changes for our department and community. Among the most notable is the establishment of a new Animal Control Unit, following the restructuring of Mesa County Animal Services. In just six months, we have laid the foundation for a unit dedicated to education, customer service, and reuniting lost pets with their families. Additionally, we have added two officers to our Traffic Unit and created a new patrol team to enhance community safety and proactive policing efforts.

None of these accomplishments would be possible without the unwavering support of City leadership, local public safety partners, businesses, and of course, our community. Together, we are building a safer, stronger Grand Junction.

For me, Grand Junction has always been a special place, and after 25 years with the Grand Junction Police Department, I am still deeply proud to serve this incredible community. The men and women of the Grand Junction Police Department are what make this organization exceptional, and their commitment to serving this community inspires me daily.

As we move forward into 2025, I want to thank you for your continued trust and support. We remain committed to being good stewards of your trust, delivering professional service, and making Grand Junction a community where everyone feels safe.

Sincerely,

Matt Smith – Chief of Police

POLICE OPERATIONS

The Grand Junction Police Department is organized into three vital divisions – Police Operations, Services, and Special Teams. Each play a crucial role in ensuring the safety and well-being of the City of Grand Junction.

The Police Operations Division serves as the backbone of the department's public safety efforts, focusing on law enforcement and responding to calls for service. This division is committed to maintaining community security through proactive policing and traffic management. Key components of the Police Operations Division include Patrol, Traffic Unit, Police Service Technicians, and Municipal Park Rangers.

PATROL

Officer Gonzalez responding to an incident

The Grand Junction Police Department was established in 1882 and consisted of one town marshal. The department has evolved significantly over time, from the use of a red call light mounted on the top of a bank which was activated for officer assistance to 911 telecommunicators dispatching calls to officers. Today, it wouldn't be big news to hire a female officer like it was in 1978 when the GJPD hired its first female officer, Officer Josephine Henson.

The Grand Junction Police Department has grown from the first single town marshal to over 130 budgeted sworn officers who serve our community in various roles. In 2024, the Grand Junction Police Department responded to 67,710 calls for service, which was an increase in over 5,000 calls in 2023. One of the changes the Grand Junction Police Department made at the end of 2024, was to stand up a seventh Patrol Team to better address the growing number of calls for service as our community grows.

Motor Technicians Ferguson and Bavor

In 1930, Alfred Gram became the GJPD's first motorcycle officer, paving the way for the department's use of motorcycles in traffic enforcement. In 1998, the GJPD established its first official dedicated Traffic Unit, which included four motorcycle officers, two civilian traffic service technicians, and one sergeant. While its size has varied over the years—often influenced by economic conditions and staffing levels—the core mission of the GJPD Traffic Unit has remained steadfast: enhancing roadway safety through traffic enforcement, crash response, education, and crash investigation.

Today, this dedicated team is led by a sergeant and includes two highly skilled Level Three and Four Motor Technicians, both recognized as top crash investigators on the Western Slope. Their expertise extends beyond enforcement, as they devote countless hours to crash reconstruction, community outreach events, education, and motors training for law enforcement agencies across the region.

Policing has changed across the country throughout the years and the Grand Junction Police Department has evolved to meet the needs of the community. While crime evolves with the change in population, illegal substances and other contributing factors, one thing remains constant- the broad spectrum of calls for service, ranging from emergencies to routine incidents. GJPD patrol officers adapt their responses based on the specific nature of the incident, available resources, and the needs of the community. Each call, no matter the type, requires a response that plays a vital role in maintaining public safety and trust.

MUNICIPAL PARK RANGERS

In 2024, the City of Grand Junction obtained a grant to purchase E-bikes to replace the traditional style bicycles Municipal Park Rangers (MPR) used. The motorized E-bikes allow MPRs to travel up to 10-15 miles further than the older traditional bicycles. This civilian-staffed unit, often seen on two-wheels, handles parking violations, assists patrol units, and monitors the various recreational trails, parks, and downtown areas.

POLICE SERVICE TECHNICIANS

In July of 1981, the Grand Junction Police Department created the position of Police Service Technician, a civilian position, to handle non-emergent and routine incidents. The unit was originated to assist patrol officers with the heavy workload during the daytime hours, allowing sworn officers to handle 911 calls. This still holds true today and Police Service Technicians play a vital role in handling theft and fraud reports, allowing patrol officers to handle emergencies.

The Grand Junction Police Department's Services Division encompasses a wide range of essential functions carried out by both sworn and non-sworn personnel. This division extends beyond traditional patrol duties, providing specialized services and critical administrative support.

A significant portion of the GJPD's civilian workforce is part of the Services Division, delivering invaluable contributions to Patrol operations and the community.

The Services Division includes Professional Standards, Training, Recruiting, Internal Affairs, 911 Dispatch, Volunteer Services, Victim Services, Records, Evidence/Property, Digital Forensics, Drug Chemistry, and the Quartermaster. Together, these operations form a cornerstone of the department's efficiency and service excellence.

The Grand Junction Police Department purchased its first camera for crime scene documentation in 1949, but it wasn't until the 1960s that the GJPD formed its own crime lab. Over the years, the Grand Junction Police Department's Crime Lab has grown to be one of the most well-regarded teams on the Western Slope. This team consists of a Civilian Manager/Latent Print Expert, two Digital Forensic Analysts, two Criminalists, and five Evidence/Property Technicians- all certified in various forensic disciplines.

In 1989, the GJPD handled evidence in over 1,600 cases. The amount of evidence collected and submitted has increased significantly over the years, with an average of close to 1,750 items submitted monthly, in 2024. The GJPD's Crime Lab is responsible for maintaining all physical and digital evidence and body-worn camera footage, as well as the processing of over 12,000 pieces of evidence by our chemists stationed at the Colorado Bureau of Investigations. In 2024, the Grand Junction Police Department collected 21,077 pieces of evidence.

VICTIM SERVICES

The Grand Junction Police Department's Victim Assistance Program was established in 1991, under the direction of the Police Chaplain. A year later, volunteers were added to the program who were trained to address the needs of victims of crimes and other traumatic incidents. While the name of the program, Victim Services, has evolved over the years, the objective remains the same - assisting victims. A robust group of Victim Services volunteers are available every hour, 365 days per year, and are equipped to deal with difficulties like trauma, domestic violence, sexual assaults, and more. In 2024, Victim Services volunteers volunteered a total of 17,986.55 hours.

In 2024, Grand Junction Police Victim Services Volunteer, Laurel Walters, was recognized for her dedicated service to the Grand Junction Police Department's Victim Services Program and awarded the Carol Hacker Award for Outstanding Victim Advocate by the Colorado Organization for Victim Assistance or COVA. This prestigious award recognizes individuals who have made a significant impact on the lives of crime victims through their volunteer efforts. Laurel is one of over 30 volunteers who has provided crucial support to victims in need and has volunteered over 3,000 hours since joining this team.

The Grand Junction Police Department worked with a special investigator in the 1930s to assist in the investigation of crimes and by the 1940s, the department hired its first full-time detective. The Detective Bureau was formally established in 1970 and consisted of one commanding officer and three detectives.

Today, the Investigations Division has evolved to meet the demands of the growing and changing community. It is organized into two primary divisions: Crimes Against Persons and Crimes Against Property. By leveraging advanced technology, specialized training, and strategic adaptability, the unit effectively addresses emerging crime trends and gathers critical information to ensure the safety and security of our community.

Fentanyl pills seized by DTF

The first dedicated joint narcotics enforcement team, now called the Western Colorado Drug Task Force, was established in 1982 through a partnership between the Grand Junction Police Department and the Mesa County Sheriff's Office to combine resources for investigating the illegal distribution of drugs. Over the years, this collaboration has expanded to include state and federal government partners.

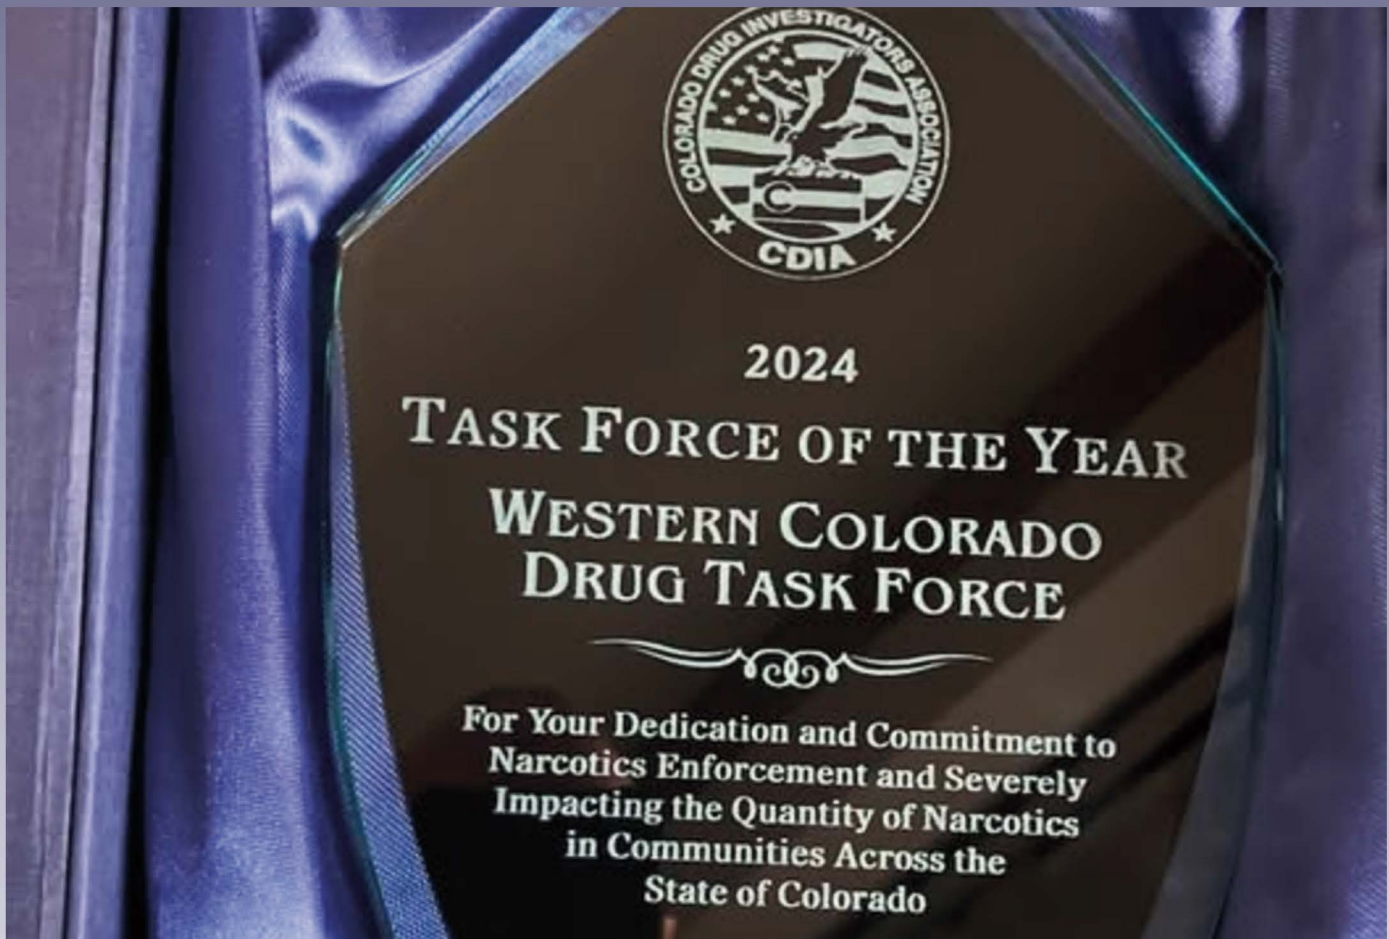

While the primary focus is on illegal drug investigations, the task force also plays a vital role in locating and apprehending dangerous fugitives, assisting with complex criminal investigations, and serving as a resource for other local, state, and federal law enforcement agencies.

Collateral assignments include roles such as the Incident Dispatch Team, K9 Officer, Crisis Negotiation Team member, Honor Guard, SWAT Operator, Bomb Squad Technician, Field Training Officer, Firearms Instructor, Driving Instructor, Patrol and Defensive Tactics Training Officer, Drone Operator, Peer Support, and Forensic Investigator.

TRAINING

The Grand Junction Police Department places a high value on comprehensive training at all levels, ensuring that both sworn officers and civilian team members are well-prepared to serve the community effectively.

Under Colorado Peace Officer Standards & Training (POST) Rule 28, every Peace Officer is required to complete 24 hours of training annually, with at least 12 of those hours focused on perishable skills such as firearms, driving, and arrest control. POST Rule 24 further mandates critical trainings, including de-escalation, community policing, and anti-bias education.

In 1993, the GJPD implemented a rigorous 40-hour annual In-Service training for all sworn officers. This training, held each January through February exceeds POST standards and is completed alongside officers' regular work schedules. Additionally, the GJPD surpasses required training hours with specialized programs such as advanced firearms training, crisis intervention, drone operations, and bi-weekly SWAT training.

Non-sworn members of the department also receive robust training throughout the year, including forensic investigations, emergency communications, Colorado Open Records compliance, and more.

By prioritizing exceptional training for all staff, the Grand Junction Police Department demonstrates its unwavering commitment to excellence in public safety and community service.

This team will be dedicated to traffic enforcement and response to traffic crashes, while also enhancing community safety and proactive policing efforts.

HISTORY OF THE BADGE

Long before the establishment of modern law enforcement, the concept of a badge emerged, initially serving as a symbol of loyalty to specific households during medieval times. Over time, badges evolved into markers of authority among public servants, laying the foundation for police officers to denote their rank.

The original design of the GJPD badge was very standard. In the early 2000s, a dedicated team undertook the task of redesigning the badge, incorporating personalized elements such as the city seal and the year of incorporation, adding a unique touch to our insignia. However, our badge is more than a sign of rank, or position. It symbolizes the honor and courage it takes to defend the constitution and protect the citizens of our community no matter the cost. Which is why it is so cherished by those who wear it. We are honored to pass this tradition on to our next generation of officers and leaders.
